U.S. Probation Officer Action:

Mr. Cardona-Perez commenced his term of supervised release in his native Puerto Rico on April 6, 2014. We recently received a letter from the U.S. Probation Office in the District of Puerto Rico which indicates that on February 23, 2015, Mr. Cardona-Perez' wife filed a complaint with local police, alleging that Mr. Cardona-Perez struck her in the course of a domestic argument. Both Mr. Cardona-Perez and his wife were questioned by police, who determined that they had in fact struck each other during the argument. Ms. Cardona-Perez was granted a restraining order but declined to proceed with any criminal action against Mr. Cardona-Perez and no charges were filed. Mr. Cardona-Perez' probation officer subsequently directed him to participate in anger management treatment.

The U.S. Probation Office in the District of Puerto Rico has also informed us that on April 7, 2015, Mr. Cardona-Perez relocated to live with relatives in Connecticut and he is currently being supervised by the probation office in that district.

At this time, we are seeking only to inform the Court of this non-compliance and are not currently seeking any additional action.
